

to me ▾

Lorne,

Thank you for covering border security and reaching out with your query. The following is attributable to a CBP spokesperson:

Under the Privacy Act, U.S. Customs and Border Protection is prevented from discussing individual incidents of travelers arriving at the ports of entry.

All persons entering the country, including U.S. citizens, are subject to examination and search. CBP uses diverse factors to refer individuals for selected examinations and there are instances when this process may take longer than normal. CBP is committed to ensuring the agency is able to execute its missions while protecting the human rights, civil rights, and dignity of those with whom we come in contact.

Thank you again for your work on this. Please let us know if we can be of further assistance.

Respectfully,

Meredith